David Lyons Joins BBA's Public Interest Leadership Program

Anderson & Kreiger is pleased to announce that David Lyons has been selected as a member of the 2019 Boston Bar Association Public Interest Leadership Program ("PILP"). Since David joined Anderson & Kreiger in 2017, he has become a valued member of A&K's litigation, environmental, and municipal practice groups. David focuses his practice on environmental and land use law, and he has litigated several cases on behalf of Massachusetts state agencies and municipalities. He also gives back to his community through pro bono legal work and as a member of the Cambridge Conservation Commission.

The Boston Bar Association began the PILP program in 2003 to strengthen the region's network of lawyers focused on public interest law. David's participation in the PILP program continues A&K's tradition of public service and pro bono work.
