Overview

Insurance companies turn to Beth for her experience analyzing and litigating medical professional liability coverage issues for medical professionals, hospitals, and clinics. She also helps medical professional liability insurance carriers draft policy forms.

Beth also represents policyholders in insurance coverage disputes involving general liability insurance, directors' and officers' liability insurance, and other types of liability insurance. Beth has litigated, mediated or arbitrated insurance coverage disputes involving environmental contamination, asbestos-related bodily injury and property damage, toxic torts, products liability, construction defects and bad faith.

Beth's focus is simple: she helps her policyholder clients get the insurance coverage for which they paid premiums when they need it; helps her insurance company clients avoid providing coverage for which they did not contract and did not collect any premiums; and, when the existence of insurance coverage is a murky issue that could be resolved either way, she seeks the best possible result for her client.
