Overview

Marissa joined Anderson & Kreiger in 2022 after graduating from Northeastern University School of Law and Yale School of the Environment. During law school, she was a member of the Northeastern Environmental Law Society and Associate editor of the Northeastern University Law Review, and during her time at Yale she focused on biological oceanography, wetlands, and coastal ecosystem restoration. She recently interned for the U.S. Department of Justice, Environmental and Natural Resources Division where she worked on Clean Water Act enforcement matters, and Boston Harbor Now, where she worked on climate resilience strategies for East Boston's industrial waterfront. Marissa has also served as a law clerk for the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's Region 1 Office of Regional Counsel. Prior to law school, Marissa worked as a research assistant at the Harvard T.H. Chan School of Public Health on a team studying disparities in pregnancy exposure to endocrine-disrupting chemicals in personal care products.
