Overview

Liliana Bechtold is an associate at Anderson & Kreiger who works on matters involving public law, real estate, land use, and litigation. She brings a particular interest in the ways that law, public policy, and community needs intersect in housing and development matters.

Liliana's background includes work with Greater Boston Legal Services and the Cambridge Housing Authority, where she gained experience with housing litigation, regulatory compliance, and affordable and public housing matters. Before law school, she studied urban development and housing policy and conducted research on zoning, community land trusts, and approaches to creating and preserving affordable housing.

Liliana first joined Anderson & Kreiger as a summer associate.
